“Design and Construction: Hand and Mind The Work of Rockhill & Associates and Studio 804”

Presented by Dan Rockhill

The work of the firm Rockhill and Associates is tightly bound to the natural milieu and culture of the Kansas region. In the spirit of regionalism, the area’s archetypal forms, Spartan aesthetics, frugal methods, and relationship to nature permeate the results. The firm has received numerous awards, including Residential Architect magazine’s Firm of the Year, one of Natural Home magazine’s Top Ten Green Architecture Firms, and Architecture magazine’s “Home of the Year.”

Dan Rockhill is the J L Constant Distinguished Professor of Architecture at the University of Kansas and Executive Director of Studio 804. For more information, visit www.rockhillandassociates.com and www.studio804.com.

“Buildings We Love to Hate”

Presented by Robert Bruegmann

The University of Wisconsin wants to tear down the Humanities Building. Built in the 1960s it is routinely described in the press as a big, hulking structure in the Brutalist style, dysfunctional and out of keeping with the rest of the campus. However, the building was designed by Harry Weese of Chicago, one of the country’s most successful and sensitive architects in the postwar years. Is it possible that it’s the era of the building and not its design that is the problem, and that as tastes change we will look at this building quite differently? This lecture will explore the similarities between some of the most thoroughly disliked buildings of past eras.

Robert Bruegmann is a University Distinguished Professor of Art History, Architecture, and Urban Planning at the University of Illinois at Chicago. He is the author of “Sprawl, A Compact History,” 2005, and “The Architecture of Harry Weese,” 2010.

“Frank Lloyd Wright’s Non-Architectural Sources”

Presented by Dr. Sidney Robinson

The power of Frank Lloyd Wright’s creativity is demonstrated by the wide range of sources on which he based his architecture. He exercised his remarkable interpretive ability on Louis Sullivan’s ornament, Japanese prints, music, and his own ornament. Wright’s interpretation of non-architectural sources is the clearest evidence of his goal to make architecture integral and inclusive, not a commodity driven by fashion. This lecture will address what sources Wright used and how he used them to make architecture.

Dr. Robinson, AIA, is Emeritus Associate Professor of Art History at the University of Illinois at Chicago and presently on the faculty of the Frank Lloyd Wright School of Architecture.

“10-20-20 Problem Solving - PechaKucha”

As the Leonard Cohen song goes: “There is a crack in everything. That’s how the light gets in.”

Discover how creative professionals wrestle with design dilemmas, learn from failures and ultimately make our world more functional, beautiful, and inspiring. The 10-20-20 concept is simple: Each of 10 presenters shows 20 images for 20 seconds apiece to express his or her problem-solving prowess. Naturally, we’ve invited only the very best from fields such as Architecture, Landscape Architecture, Industrial Design, Fashion, and Graphic Design to attempt this arduous feat. Will they use their convergent thinking abilities to crack the conundrum of fitting it all into 6 minutes and 40 seconds?

The lecture series is sponsored by Southwest Chapter AIA Wisconsin, Monona Terrace, and Frank Lloyd Wright® Wisconsin.
