

MONONA TERRACE 2016 ANNUAL REPORT

MONONA TERRACE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR. GREGG MCMANNERS

For Monona Terrace Community and Convention Center, 2016 was a year that set a new standard for event revenue, community events and tourism opportunities. As Monona Terrace nears its 20th birthday in July, this strong performance reaffirms our belief that if given the proper support this community asset can consistently produce significant economic, cultural and social benefits for the community.

From a business perspective we hosted 7 international, 28 national and 13 regional conventions. Our convention and conference business alone resulted in an estimated 48 million dollar impact on Madison's economy over the course of the year. In all, we hosted 680 events, which resulted in more than 15,000,000 square feet of space rented and over 500,000 people served at catered functions.

Community Events staff introduced exciting new programs including Madison Mini Maker Faire and in partnership with WI Public Television, premieres of Hamilton's America and Wisconsin Winter from the Air. Programs and concerts drew almost 50,000 local residents despite an uncooperative weather pattern at times for the outdoor concerts. More and more Madison area residents are being drawn to Monona Terrace by our variety of public offerings.

Our tourism promotion efforts got a boost with the addition of the Frank Lloyd Wright Trail, introduced by the Wisconsin Department of Tourism in 2016. Monona Terrace is a site to visit on the trail along with other famous Wright buildings in Wisconsin. Visitors from all over the world continue to tour Monona Terrace to learn more about Wright and his principles of architecture.

2016 was also a year of unprecedented growth in the infrastructure of competitive destination markets across the state. From LaCrosse to Brookfield to the Fox River Valley, more and more communities are investing in the meeting and convention market as they see the true benefits this industry provides. Madison will not be lost in the competitive conversation and our appearance on many "Top 10" lists helps to publicize the city's status as a must-see destination.

It is important to note in many instances our city is considered "Top 10" as a result of investments made. Over the last 19 years the downtown has been transformed into its own destination within the destination of Madison. We need to continue investing in our future, and Judge Doyle Square—with a hotel as a component—is the next big project that will add to our appeal as a convention location.

Monona Terrace is an exceptional facility that Madisonians have seen flourish since opening in 1997. This annual report provides a snapshot of our efforts, activities, programming and the results. We are proud of our accomplishments, but not complacent; and we are confident that with community investment and support, our contributions to the city will grow over the next 20 years.

Sincerely,

MONONA TERRACE BOARD OF DIRECTORS CHAIR. GLENN KRIEG

I am honored to have again served as the Chair of the Monona Terrace Community and Convention Center Board for 2016. As a member of the board for the past 10 years, I can attest that this was a truly remarkable year. The sales growth and economic impact of Monona Terrace provides a glimpse of what this organization's capabilities are if given the right circumstances and the proper support.

During this past year, Monona Terrace's customers booked almost 48,000 room nights in Madison and generated over $48,240,000 in economic impact from their conferences and conventions. While hosting 680 events, Monona Terrace achieved a 17% sales increase over 2015, which is extraordinary considering Monona Terrace will celebrate its 20th year of operations in July of 2017.

The Board and staff of Monona Terrace have long stated that the facility has been held back from performing at a level of optimum efficiency in hosting conventions and conferences. That in fact, Monona Terrace is constrained by the lack of hotel rooms in close proximity which limits the volume of business it can host.

Madison is a truly great destination and its excellent reputation is growing more widespread. Business, group and leisure travelers are coming to Madison in record numbers. This is reflected in the growth of room tax collections and the strong financial performance of hotels not only downtown, but at almost every hotel within city limits. Developers and business owners are recognizing the market's potential and consequently we are experiencing more investment both in Madison's attractions and its lodging accommodations.

The board is encouraged by the progress of development around Monona Terrace as well. The Judge Doyle Square (JDS) project with its hotel rooms is paramount for the continued success of Monona Terrace. In the meantime, until the JDS hotel opens, we applaud the investment made at the Park Hotel and Concourse Hotel to upgrade their properties for our visitors. Finally, we welcome the Marriott AC to the list of available downtown hotels; it is scheduled to open in spring of 2017 and will add quality guest room inventory to the market.

Given the right support and investment by the community and our partners, we are confident Monona Terrace will deliver economic impact and community enhancement equal to and surpassing past results. We look forward to 2017 invigorated by our 2016 accomplishments yet realizing we compete locally, regionally, nationally and internationally for clients that are being courted by many all over the world. Madison has proven it can compete, and as a board we stand ready to work hand-in-hand with local leaders, businesses and organizations to realize the full potential of Madison and Monona Terrace as a nationally renowned meeting facility, community gathering place, and tourist destination.

Sincerely,

GREATER MADISON CONVENTION & VISITORS BUREAU

The travel industry has always been a place where people invest their money to expand their horizons through new experiences. Our industry is not focused on consumption of material things, but rather the creation of memories.

Today visitors' expectations for tailored, fresh, new experiences and personal service far and above exceed any expectations of the past. The growth of social media has exponentially elevated our need and expectations for personal attention.

In searching for and securing business for Madison and Monona Terrace, today our job goes far beyond the assurance that we can deliver on the hard specifications of specific event needs. What is equally important today is understanding a group's interests and desires and the presentation of the specific experiences their event attendees will expect when they are here. These expectations stretch far beyond the beautiful walls of Monona Terrace and our guests' hotels. They rest in our great restaurants, interesting attractions, our lakes, bike paths and more.

Curating and delivering these experiences is exciting—but daunting.

To assist us in the curation and delivery of these destination experiences, we must collaborate with and support our partners: hotels, restaurants, attractions, recreation outfitters, municipalities, etc. These partners are our ultimate salespersons and where and with whom our visitors' expectations will be fulfilled. The support we provide our partners, focuses on the tools and knowledge they need to understand and anticipate their guests' demands.

In 2017, we will be expanding our efforts to identify and explore the possibility of creating new visitor experiences. We also will continue our efforts to advocate for infrastructure needed to carry the destination into the future, including a hotel on Judge Doyle Square, the conversations surrounding improvements along John Nolen Drive to further celebrate our great lake fronts, reimagining the Alliant Energy Center campus and more. We also will be supporting efforts to bolster our industry's workforce, and we will be adopting a new destination brand that will reflect the unique character of Madison and what guests can expect when they make the investment to visit our great city.

Our industry is highly competitive and we must strive to stay ahead of the curve and our competition. We are extremely grateful for the high quality service and attention Monona Terrace, Monona Catering and our partners bestow on our clients. And while we cannot control the overall trajectory of the economy, we have confidence in our partners and in our ability to have continued success in attracting visitors and groups to this great destination.
