FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT

The Vision

Frank Lloyd Wright originally proposed a design for the Monona Terrace Community and Convention Center in 1938. He eschewed the traditional Victorian ornamentation and classical design trends of the time and embraced a purer architectural expression, characterized by geometric forms, open floor plans, and low-hipped roofs that harmonized with the landscape. He imagined a bold curvilinear gathering place intended to connect the shores of Lake Monona to the State Capitol. While the design was revised many times, its signature curves remained a defining feature. Today, Monona Terrace blends Wright's timeless vision with cutting-edge technology and modern amenities, creating a space that continues to inspire and bring people together.
